Acreage Measurement & Inspection Service Aids Farmers

Measurement and set-aside inspection service offered at cost by the Agricultural Stabilization, and Conservation Service (ASCS) office can be a real money-saver for farmers, reports James R. Ford,Jr., local farm program official.

Many area farmers requested the service when they signed up in the 1973 farm programs for feed grain, and wheat, said County ASC Committee Chairman James R. Ford, Jr., but those who didn't still have time to get measurement and inspection service before they certify to their acreages.

"The measurement service by trained ASCS personnel, which includes staking and referencing, is useful to producers who want to be sure of their crop, set-aside, or conserving base acreages.

"Set-aside inspection service is an advance checkout to determine if the designated acreage meets quality requirements for set-aside land," Mr. Ford said.

Both services carry a guarantee that if the producer stays within the measured and staked area and keeps to his designated set-aside, no penalties will be imposed on him if it is later found there was a mistake in the measurement or inspection service.

"That can be quite a savings, right there," the Chairman said, "because a mistake in certifying acreage can mean the loss of some or all of a farm program payment.

"Another way ASCS measurement service saves money for a farmer is when he proves crop yields. Along with his total production, he has a record of the exact acreage, and that means he can prove yield-per-acre down to the decimal," the ASC committee chairman added.

Measurement and set-aside inspection service can be obtained for any farm program purpose by phone, writing, or dropping by the ASCS county office.

National Honor Society

The National Honor Society of Appomattox County High School met on March 14, 1973 at the school auditorium. President Ray Robinson called the meeting to order and then the Chaplain, Pam Chenault, led the club in devotions. Kay started the business session by asking for the minutes of the last meeting. After the minutes were read by Brenda Watkins, they were approved. Kay then asked for nominations for delegates to go to the national honor Society Southwestern Conference. Four delegates were elected: Lelia Austin, Al Fontaine Johnson, Kay Robinson, and Lou Beamer. This Conference is to be held March 31 in Parisburg, Va. Mrs. Foster, the club sponsor, brought up the fact that we would participate in Klassroom Kwiz on April 30. She also said that anyone interested in running for the district offfice of President, Vice-President, or Secretary should contact her.

After the business was taken care of, Martha Harvey introduced the Appomattox County High School Choir directed by Mrs. Karen Gibson. The choir presented a fine program of varied music, including a solo part by John Smith and a special ensemble presentation. The meeting was adjourned by Kay Robinson after the choir's performance.

New Life and Breath Information Center

The offices of the Central Virginia Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association is now an enlarged source of health information for the public. In answering the expanded activities of the TB-RD association, M. Cleveland Jones, president, said, "Respiratory disease patients and their families have long needed answers about health services in our community. The establishment of the "Life and Breath" Information Center where the public can come by or call for such information is a giant step toward a healthier population."

"A resident in our area no longer needs to flounder, as to where to turn for help," he stated. "The Central Virginia Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association stands ready to provide the necessary answers. If we don't know, we'll find out for him".

The new service is guided by the staff at the TB-RD association, but manned by volunteers who are trained to provide answers and to research questions. There are still openings on the volunteer staff to be filled. Area citizens are invited to serve in a capacity suited to their time and talents.

Among the volunteer duties are staffing the information center, distributing health information materials, presenting educational programs in schools, speaking to clubs and organizations, and transporting patients to clinics and hospitals.

The association will also serve as a complaint center for reporting noticeable air pollution. The complaint will be referred to the proper authority.

Free pamphlets and booklets on respiratory diseases and related subjects are available at the "Life and Breath" Information Center and a film loan service is provided for organizations. A speakers' bureau can be called upon for talks explaining the new service and for discussion of the problems concerned with tuberculosis and other respiratory ailments.

(Mrs.) Emma G. Anthony, Executive Director of the association said, "We are excited about the "Life and Breath" Information Center because it emphasizes and enlarges the health services already given in our area. We hope our community will become aware of the assistance we offer and use it to the fullest extent."

"Come by the Central Virginia Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association for a visit, or call 392-5258 whenever help is needed."
